Innovative usage of digital pen and paper mesmerizes and impresses customers and judges.

Singapore - October 15, 2008 : The biennial National Infocomm Awards (NIA), organised by the Infocomm Development Authority of Singapore (IDA) and the Singapore Infocomm Technology Federation (SiTF), last night awarded RSTN Consulting's inQflow solution with a Merit Award for the Most Innovative Infocomm Product/Service.

The NIA honour the best in infocomm innovation in Singapore. It is the definitive award for the infocomm industry in Singapore that recognises the 'best of breed' in information technology services. RSTN's inQflow is among those that have conclusively demonstrated practical usage, innovative in approach and commercialisation. inQflow solution relies on common and familiar writing with pen and paper, except that with the use of innovative technologies, the paper becomes "alive" and the pen becomes "intelligent". Using normal paper printed with patented dots, the solution converts handwritten information into digital documents which automatically gets transferred into any backend repository.

Steven Lim, CEO of RSTN said, "Our customers work with us to maintain their competitive advantage and to have a leading edge; and to have the NIA recognize this is a huge honour for all of us. This is great testimony for our direction and solution, particularly in these trying economic times."

Steven continues: "There is plenty of room for customers across all industry to leverage on inQflow solution so as to empower their mobile sales force to become highly productive and efficient. inQflow truly bridges the gap between the conventional IT solutions via Tablet PCs or Notebooks and the traditional paper and pen".
